The only thing worthy of note in the preceedings of the Senate, to-day, was the passage of a bill for the re-lief of Mrs. Hamilton, the widow of Alexander Hamilton. It passed by a majority of upwards of two-thirds. The bill provides for the payment to Mrs. Hamilton of twenty thousand dollars, on the delivery by her to the librarian of Congress, of the manuscripts of her deceased husband, and five hundred printed copies of the same, bound in leather. There are, I believe, five volumes, each to consist of five hundred pages.

bill so signed is now in the hands of the President.

A message from the President to the Senate, handed in to-day while that body was in session, gave rise to the rumor that the subject of the paper was the creation of a Licutenant General of the United States army. No such message or proposition has as yet been sent to the Senate, nor do I think it will be sent until the receipt of intelligence from Mexico. I feel confident in saying, that whenever such a message is sent, if it should ever be, it will be a public and not a private one, and will be communicated to both houses at the same time. The creation as I have before remarked, will deeped allocation. tion, as I have before remarked, will depend altogether on the necessity that may arise. Should Mexico show a disposition to make peace, there will be no Lieutenant General created. Should the war continue, there is a probability that the President may deem such a grade

The vote on the reference of the President's message will be taken in the House to-morrow, as the debate was, by resolution, closed at three o'clock to day. I am rejoiced at this, as there has been abundance of time already wasted in this aimless discussion.
